Virtual Camps Behavior Policy

The Works Museum makes the safety and enjoyment of all campers a top priority. We recognize that virtual camps create a different environment than in-person camps, and have adjusted our behavior policy accordingly.

Camp expectations will be discussed on the first day of camp. Educators will redirect as necessary, however if a behavior continues, a camper may be muted or brought into an individual zoom meeting with the educator to develop a behavior plan.

Participant Behavior

- Cyber bullying or inappropriate content - bullying or mistreatment of other campers or the educator, or sending any sort of inappropriate content will not be tolerated.
- Safety - misuse of tools and materials will not be tolerated for the safety of all campers and personal property.
- Other potential issues - campers are expected to use good manners to ensure that everyone can be heard. Please make sure that your camper arrives to camp on time and ready to learn.

Actions

If any of the aforementioned behaviors occur, our educators will follow the guidelines below.

- In most instances, educators will redirect campers. If the behavior continues, parents will be contacted to problem-solve the situation along with the camper and educator to create a behavior plan for the camper so s/he can have the best experience in camp.
- Depending on the severity of the behavior, the educator may mute or remove the camper from the session at their discretion.
- If the behavior continues after a plan is in place, or if it is determined that a resolution cannot be met, The Works Museum reserves the right to remove a child from camp. No refund will be issued under these circumstances.
